5.1 IDENTIFICATION OF CULTURAL RESOURCES

While only a few buildings of national importance are in the Mission District Specific Plan area, the historical and cultural value of the individual infrastructure, buildings, and landscape features combine to form a historically and culturally rich area. Perhaps, the best analogy is to compare the Mission District’s historic and cultural resources to an adobe structure. Every brick within the structure is bound together with clay, dirt, straw, and rocks. Each different material has its own purpose and, when combined with the others, forms a strong structure. Similarly, the individual historical and cultural elements of the Mission District contribute to its overall value.

Due to limited resources, the City has not conducted an inventory of the Mission District cultural resources. However, the City has identified several locations of these structures which are listed below and shown in Exhibit 5.1.
